

BAM Trans Siberian Journey

WEST TO EAST

BAM Trans Siberian Railway, West to East (Note that this is NOT the recommended direction of travel) NIGHTS: 1

We can organise this journey from West to East (St Petersburg to Vladivostok), BUT it flows better East to West with timetables, connections and costs.

The East to West itinerary is designed to maximise the train times which allow you to have a full day in both Khabarovsk and Tynda without committing to overnight accommodation. You can make stops longer (at all points) if you wish.

Variation: Instead of travelling from Moscow direct to Severobaikalsk (which is the true BAM route) you can come by train south to Irkutsk, stop over and then join the traditional Trans Siberian route. In summer you could also take the Hydrofoil across Lake Baikal to Irkutsk. This variation will increase the cost of the overall journey as well as the time taken. Price on request.
